Bill Allison is Professor of History at Georgia Southern University, where he teaches American military history. He completed his Ph.D. in history at Bowling Green State University in 1995. He has been Visiting Professor at the Air War College and the USAF School for Advanced Air and Space Studies and held the General Harold K. Johnson Visiting Chair in Military History at the US Army War College. Allison is the author of My Lai: An American Atrocity in the Vietnam War (Johns Hopkins University Press), and Military Justice in Vietnam: The Rule of Law in an American War (University Press of Kansas), among other works, and is the new Series Editor for Modern War Studies at the University Press of Kansas.

Beth Bailey is Foundation Distinguished Professor, director of the Center for Military, War, and Society Studies, and a member of the history department at the University of Kansas. Her works in military history include America's Army: Making the All-Volunteer Force, The First Strange Place: Race and Sex in World War II Hawai'i (with David Farber), and the co-edited volumes Understanding the US Wars in Iraq and Afghanistan and Beyond Pearl Harbor: A Pacific History (forthcoming 2019). She has twice received the Army Historical Foundation Distinguished Writing award, and currently serves on the Department of the Army Historical Advisory Subcommittee. She is currently writing about how the U.S. Army, as an institution, attempted to manage "the problem of race" during the Vietnam era.

Norman Camp earned his medical degree from the University of Tennessee and received his training in psychiatry at Walter Reed General (Army) Hospital. Upon completing his psychiatric residency in the summer of 1970, Dr. Camp deployed in Vietnam where he served a year as psychiatrist and Commanding Officer of the 98th Neuropsychiatric Medical Specialty Detachment, one of two definitive psychiatric treatment centers in the theater. Dr. Camp retired from the US Army Medical Corps in 1988 at the rank of Colonel. He is currently Clinical Professor of Psychiatry at Virginia Commonwealth University Medical Center. Dr. Camp is the author of US Army Psychiatry in the Vietnam War: New Challenges in Extended Counterinsurgency Warfare, which was published in 2015 by the Office of the Army Surgeon General.

Gregory Daddis is an associate professor of history and director of Chapman University's MA Program in War and Society. Daddis joined Chapman after having served as the Chief of the American History Division in the Department of History at the United States Military Academy at West Point. A retired US Army colonel, he has served in both Operations Desert Storm and Iraqi Freedom. Daddis specializes in the history of the Vietnam Wars and the Cold War era. He has authored four books, including Withdrawal: Reassessing America's Final Years in Vietnam and Westmoreland's War: Reassessing American Strategy in Vietnam.

He has also published op-ed pieces commenting on current military affairs in the New York Times, the Washington Post, the Los Angeles Times, and National Interest magazine.

Everett Dague earned B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of South Carolina and a Ph.D. in modern military history from Florida State University. He is a Fellow of the International Napoleonic Society. Dague served as Professor of Modern History and Chair at Benedictine College in Atchison, Kansas, and is currently the Command Historian at the Army's Noncommissioned Officer Leadership Center of Excellence at Fort Bliss, Texas. Dague's publications include Napoleon and the First Empire's Ministries of War and Military Administration: The Construction of a Military Bureaucracy. His current area of research interest is US Army NCO history.

William M. Donnelly, U.S. Army Center of Military History, received his doctorate from Ohio State University. His research focuses on the U.S. Army since 1945. Commissioned from Army ROTC, he served on active duty in Korea and the Persian Gulf War, then with reserve field artillery and transportation units.

Erik W. Flint served 33 years in uniform including service as an enlisted U.S. Marine, Army National Guard infantryman, active duty Army infantry officer, and Army Reserve officer. Flint deployed twice to Iraq as a combat historian for U.S. Special Operations Command and retired as a lieutenant colonel, USAR, in January 2019. Erik is currently the Director of the Lewis Army Museum, U.S. Army Center of Military History, on board Joint Base Lewis-McChord in Washington State. He also leads battlefield tours in Europe for Stephen Ambrose Historical Tours.

Robert K. Griffith, Jr. (LTC, Ret) graduated from West Point in 1967 and subsequently served in armored and armored cavalry units in the United States, Germany and Vietnam. He is a decorated combat veteran. Griffith received his PhD from Brown University, and has taught at West Point, the Army's Command and General Staff College, and the National Defense University's Industrial College of the Armed Forces, as well as serving at the U.S. Army Center of Military History. Following his retirement from active duty in 1987, Dr. Griffith worked on military affairs on the staff of a U.S. senator and then served as Chief of Strategic Planning for the state of Rhode Island. Dr. Griffith is the author of The U.S. Army's Transition to the All-Volunteer Force, 1968-1974, and is completing a combat memoir of his time in Vietnam.

Jon T. Hoffman is Chief Historian, U.S. Army Center of Military History. He was commissioned in the Marine Corps Reserve in December 1978 and served thirty years as an infantry officer and field historian, including seventeen years of active duty, retiring at the rank of colonel in 2008. From 2010 to 2016, he served as Deputy Chief Historian for the Secretary of Defense Historical Office. His many books include From Makin to Bougainville: Marine Raiders in the Pacific War; Chesty: The Story of LtGen Lewis B. Puller

(Random House, 2001), and Forging a Total Force: The Evolution of the Guard and Reserve (co-author). Mr. Hoffman was also general editor of Tip of the Spear: U.S. Army Small-Unit Action in Iraq and A History of Innovation: U.S. Army Adaptation in War and Peace.

Richard Hunt received his PhD from the University of Pennsylvania in 1973. As an Army officer, he served as an instructor at Fort Bragg, and then as historian with the Military Assistance Command, Vietnam's Historical Office. After leaving the Army, he worked for the U.S. Army Center of Military History, initially on the Vietnam War and later as director of the Center's Oral History Program. Since 2000, Dr. Hunt has worked for the Historical Office of the Secretary of Defense (OSD), authoring volume VII of the OSD Historical Series, Melvin Laird and the Foundation of the Post-Vietnam Military 1969-1973. Currently, he is helping revise volume VIII, which covers Defense Secretaries Richardson, Schlesinger, and Rumsfeld. Dr. Hunt's other major publications include Lessons from an Unconventional War (with Richard Shultz) and Pacification, The American Struggle for Vietnam's Hearts and Minds.

Meredith Lair is an Associate Professor in the Department of History & Art History at George Mason University and director of Mason's Interdisciplinary Studies Program. She is the author of Armed with Abundance: Consumerism and Soldiering in the Vietnam War (University of North Carolina Press), which examines the noncombat experiences of American soldiers in Vietnam. Dr. Lair has also published on the public history of the Vietnam War and consulted on two museums, including the New Jersey Vietnam Era Museum & Education Center, the first permanent museum about the Vietnam War in the United States. Her current research and teaching interests include American veterans and soldier photography. She holds a doctorate in history from Penn State University.

Jennifer Mittelstadt is Professor of History at Rutgers University and served recently as the Harold K. Johnson Chair in Military History at the US Army War College (2017-2018). She specializes in the history of the twentieth-century United States, with interests in social policy, the state, privatization, women and gender, and the military. She has written numerous articles and books, including her latest, The Rise of the Military Welfare State (Harvard University Press, 2015). She co-authored the historians brief signed by the Organization of American Historians in the federal case of Doe v. Trump challenging the transgender ban in the US military.

Gary Solis currently teaches law of armed conflict as an adjunct professor at Georgetown Law. He is a retired Marine with 26 years active duty, twice serving in Vietnam. His degrees include a J.D., University of California, Davis; LL.M., George Washington Law; Ph.D., London School of Economics & Political Science. He served 18 years as a judge advocate, and for 6 years directed the law of war program at West Point, where he received the Apgar Award as West Point's outstanding professor in 2006. His publications include: Marines and Military Law in Vietnam; Son Thang: An American War Crime, and The Law of Armed Conflict. Dr. Solis was a 2007 Library of Congress scholar in residence and served on the editorial board for ICRC's International Review of the Red Cross (2010-15).

Charissa Threat is Associate Professor of History at Chapman University, where she teaches courses in U.S. and African American history. Her research interests are in race and gender in twentieth century U.S. history, civil rights, community activism, and civil-military relations. Her first book, Nursing Civil Rights: Gender and Race in the Army Nurse Corps (University of Illinois Press, 2015), won the 2017 Lavinia L. Dock Book Award from the American Association for the History of Nursing. She is currently at work on her second book, "Sweethearts and Pin-Ups," which examines home-front activities, wartime participation, and intimate relations among African American women and men in the context of the Second World War.

Jacqueline E. Whitt is an Associate Professor of Strategy and Co-Editor-in-Chief of WAR ROOM at the US Army War College. She teaches courses on the Theory of War and Strategy, National Security Policy, War and Social Change, and Great Books for Strategists. Her first book, Bringing God to Men: American Military Chaplains and the Vietnam War, won the Richard W. Leopold prize from the Organization for American Historians. Dr. Whitt's current work examines how narrative, or story-telling, has shaped American strategies since 1945. She also writes about and lectures on diversity in the contemporary American military. Her BA is from Hollins University (Roanoke, VA) and she earned her MA and PhD in Military and American History from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Dr. James H. Willbanks is Professor Emeritus of Military History at the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. He joined the CGSC faculty in 1992, when he retired from the Army as a Lieutenant Colonel with twenty-three years' service as an Infantry officer. Dr. Willbanks is the author or editor of twenty books, including A Raid Too Far, Abandoning Vietnam, The Battle of An Loc, The Tet Offensive: A Concise History, and Vietnam War Almanac. Dr. Willbanks served as consultant for and appeared in the Ken Burns Vietnam documentary.
